Love Stories Sean & Lindsay

Sean and Lindsay first met while students at Queen's University and also members of the naval reserve at HMCS Catarauqui. They began dating in February 1998 when Lindsay was in her second year and Sean in his third year at Queen's. The nature of their summer jobs meant that they were often on opposite coasts - Sean in Esquimalt (beside Victoria) and Lindsay in Halifax or vice-versa. Despite the distance, their romance continued. When they graduated Sean was offered a job with the Foreign Service. In 2001 the couple headed for Nairobi, Kenya (in East Africa) where they were posted for four years. It was there where Sean proposed to Lindsay in their 1920s colonial house. While they could have had a beautiful wedding in their garden, they wanted to have the ceremony in Canada. Once they began their search for venues in Kingston (where they first met and Lindsay's parents live) it quickly became apparent that the Kingston 1000 Islands Cruises was the best option for them. They chose the Island Star because of its accessibility, on board kitchen, modern facilities and glass top. Blessed with a lovely sunny day, a clear sky, beautiful sunset and a full moon their guests had a wonderful time and many commented on how much they enjoyed the on board atmosphere and their generous portioned dinners. Some commented too on how nice it was to go to a wedding that took place other than at a stuffy wedding hall.
